

Editorial Mission of JEEMS

The main aim of the Journal of East European Management Studies (JEEMS) is to promote dialogue and cooperation among scholars from all countries who seek to examine, explore and explain the behaviour and practices of management within the transforming societies of Central and Eastern Europe. As such, the theoretical interests of the journal focus on a) organizational and management change; b) Central and East European societies (including those on the fringes of Europe) undergoing processes of transition or transformation; and c) scientific issues of business, management and organisation that arise in such contexts. In this regard, JEEMS particularly welcomes papers that draw on a behavioral perspective.

By fostering the exchange of ideas within the academic community and between management academics and management practitioners, JEEMS aims to contribute to the development of knowledge and practice across the Central and East European region. In this way, the journal hopes to cultivate and spread a sophisticated understanding of management trends and tendencies as they emerge through the process of transformation. The concern with management practices and issues is meant in the broadest sense to include the problems of steering politico-economic processes and the management of all types of organized action and their social embeddedness.

JEEMS aims to attract social scientific contributions from scholars of any nation and region, but particularly wishes to encourage authors from those countries directly experiencing transformational change. Its potential readership is international, comprising academics and practitioners with an involvement or interest in the management of change in transforming societies in Central and Eastern Europe.
