I would like to express my immense gratitude to everyone – the urban dwellers of Maputo and Johannesburg who let me into their lives, research assistants, colleagues, friends and family, and, last but not least, the University of Basel and funding institutions – without whom this book would not have been possible. The PhD project was funded by an initial grant from the Janggen-Pöhn Foundation, a three-year scholarship from the Humer Foundation for Academic Talent, a travel grant from the Swiss–South Africa Joint Research Programme, a one-year scholarship from the Forschungsfond (Funding for Excellent Young Researchers at the University of Basel), and it received funding by the Swiss National Science Foundation for open access publication.

Special thanks go to my research assistants Thabo Mopasi, Nnana Tau and Fernando Tivane. As friends, key informants and often co-researchers, they shaped this ethnography distinctively. I am also very grateful to Cristiana Cuamba, Luversan Gerard, Abigail Mujaji, Dona Alcira and many others who offered me their friendship and hosted me in Maputo and Johannesburg. In Johannesburg, Noor Nieftagodien, and in Maputo, Elísio Jossias, acted as local supervisors. I would like to express my gratitude to them and their respective institutions, the University of the Witwatersrand and the Universidade Eduardo Mondlane.

Special thanks go to my PhD supervisors Till Förster, Ulf Hannerz and Elísio Macamo. I had the pleasure of conducting my PhD in an inspiring research environment at the University of Basel, being based at the Institute of Social Anthropology and the Centre for African Studies. Many thanks go to Veit Arlt, Carole Ammann, Kerstin Bauer, Julia Büchele, Sandra Burri, Michelle Engeler, Piet van Eeuwijk, Divine Fuh, Andrea Kaiser-Grolimund, Kathrin Heitz, Andrea Kaufmann, Rita Kesselring, Lucy Koechlin, Peter Lindenmann, Filomena Mazumdar, James Merron, Brigit Obrist, Silke Oldenburg, Sophie Oldfield, Joschka Philipps, Aïdas Sanago, Fiona Siegenthaler, Regina Stalder and Sandra Staudacher. I also would like to express my thanks to colleagues based in other corners of the world, among them Ana Aceska, Alexa Barnby, Antonádia Borges, Claudia Gastrow, Mark Lewis and Annika Teppo. Finally, many thanks go to my family, my husband Martin and my friends who supported and accompanied me in many ways during these fascinating years of doing fieldwork and writing an ethnography.
