Writing a dissertation is an enriching but also sometimes challenging process. My having managed to cope with this process, and having finally finished it, is partly due to the support and help of so many lovely people.

First of all, I would like to thank the inhabitants of the squats Chiquinha Gonzaga and Manoel Congo, for making this research possible and being willing to trust me, and for opening up their homes and private lives to me. I am so grateful for this unique experience, and for having been able to meet so many wonderful people in the squats, who taught me many lessons about life and deeply impressed me with their warmth, strength, and courage. Some of them even became friends, and included me naturally into their daily lives, which made me feel very comfortable and safe. I really miss our daily conversations! I would also like to thank all the other housing activists for taking the time to talk and answer my numerous questions so patiently.

Moreover, I thank Mauro Villas Bôas, Lia Villas Bôas, and Glaucia Vandea Lima Kessler for making me feel welcome and at home in Brazil. I thank Helena Galiza for our discussions and for giving me insights into Rio's housing situation; Fernando Mamari and FASE for putting me in contact with the squats; and of course Paulo César for picking me up late at night in his taxi, at times and places no one else was willing to.

In Germany, I would like to thank my supervisor Barbara Potthast for her valuable advice and comments and her steady support, as well as for the confidence she has placed in me over the years. Thanks to Olaf Kaltmeier, who made very useful and helpful suggestions and has been encouraging since the beginning; and Michael Zeuske for his assistance and participation in the process.

The dissertation emerged in the context of the research project Research Network for Latin America—Ethnicity Citizenship and Belonging (KLA), funded by the Federal Ministry of Education and Research (BMBF). I thank all colleagues of the KLA and the Department of Iberian and Latin American History at the University of Cologne (IHILA) for supporting me academically and practically during the doctorate. Working with you has been such an enriching and enjoyable experience.

I was also lucky to share the process of writing a dissertation with other PhD students and Postdocs. This made such a difference to me, as I was able to talk about feelings and experiences that naturally emerged during the research process with people who were going through something similar. I would thus like to thank especially my PhD colleagues in Marienburg—Anne-Christina Achterberg-Boness, Johanna Below da Cunha, Thekla Kelbert, Christiane Naumann, and Diego Augusto Menestrey Schwieger, for their emotional and academic support; and Tobias Schwarz for always being so patient with my questions and for reading and commenting on my thesis. Thanks also Johanna Steindorf for her help with the transcription of my interviews; Monika Feinen for creating the map of Rio de Janeiro; and Dawn Nell and Pax Amphlett for the proofreading of my thesis.

I was also lucky to spend three month writing in Chicago at Northwestern University, where I met many lovely people, making it an unforgettable stay for me. Thanks especially to Regina Grafe for making it all possible; Mariana Barreto Ávila and Alvaro Villagran for reading and commenting on my thesis; and Miguel Angel Avila and Qian for their company and for making me feel at home.

I would also like to thank my family. Above all, the two most important women in my life—my mother Ellen Tegge, and my grandmother Ursula Siegemund for their unlimited and unconditional support, love, encouragement and for always trying to enable me to have a good education. Without them this work would not have been possible! Thanks mom for always being there for me, and for trusting and believing in me. This is for you! And thanks to my grandmother for being the best grandmother one could ever imagine and for teaching me that even in difficult situations in life, we must look forward and make the best of it!

I also want to thank my wonderful friends for their steady loving support and encouraging words whenever necessary! You cheered me up so many times, and made the whole process so much easier for me: Vera Sel, Carsten Krumdiek, Michael Lemanczyk, Maren Linden, and Denise Schlutow.
