

Contributors

Tania Abbiate is senior researcher at the Max Planck Institute for Social Law and Social Policy in Munich. Her research interests include: social protection; African comparative constitutional law; constitutional and democratic transitions; fundamental and human rights.

Simone Baglioni is professor of Politics in the Yunus Centre for Social Business and Health at Glasgow Caledonian University, UK. His research interests focus on collective action and civil society, social innovation, employment policy and labour market and migration and asylum.

Manlio Cinalli is Research Director and Professor at CEVIPOF (CNRS – UMR 7048), Sciences Po Paris. Focusing on citizenship and political integration, his research relies on a multidisciplinary approach that combines contentious politics, networks, political behaviour, and policy studies.

Carlo De Nuzzo is an assistant researcher at Sciences Po (Paris) in TransSOL project (Transnational solidarity at times of crisis). Carlo's research interests include: history of citizenship and national identity, history of journalism, economic and social history, cultural history, history of ideas, European history, history of architecture, history of cinema, history of Avant-garde art.

Ester di Napoli is expert in international law, and she is a consultant for the Italian Independent Authority for Children and Adolescents in Rome. Her main areas of interest concern EU private international law in the field of family law.

Deniz Neriman Duru is an assistant professor at the Media and Communication Department at Lund University. Her research interests include multiculturalism, diversity, conviviality, media anthropology, anthropology of Turkey, and migrants in Europe.

Veronica Federico is senior researcher and lecturer in public comparative law with the Department of Legal Studies of the University of Florence.

Her research interests include: African comparative constitutional law; fundamental and human rights; constitutional and democratic transitions; French constitutional law and politics; and migration studies.

Eva Fernández G.G. is a PhD Candidate in political science and sociology at the University of Geneva and the Scuola Normale Superiore di Pisa. She works as a research assistant for EU projects TRANSOL and SIRIUS. Her thesis dissertation analyses individual and collective forms of solidarity-based political participation toward migrants.

Délia Girod has practiced law as a licensed attorney and is currently a PhD Candidate and a teaching assistant in social security law at the Faculty of Law of the University of Geneva. Her researches focus on the formal and material impacts of the human right to social security on Swiss legislation, and on the contemporary social changes challenging solidarity and social security.

Christian Lahusen holds a Chair of Sociology at the Department of Social Sciences, University of Siegen. His research is devoted to the sociology of Europe, political participation, civil society and social movements, to social exclusion and political conflicts, and to social theory.

Nicola Maggini is Research Fellow at the Department of Legal Sciences of the University of Florence and a member of the Italian Centre for Electoral Studies (CISE). His main research interests are socio-political attitudes, electoral systems, voting behaviour and party competition in comparative perspective.

Maria Mexi is a social and political scientist affiliated to the Institute of Citizenship Studies at the University of Geneva. Her research interests fall within the areas of the future of work, social dialogue and migration.

Tom Montgomery is a researcher in the Yunus Centre for Social Business and Health at Glasgow Caledonian University, UK. The focus of his research is civil society, collective action, employment, social innovation and social policy.

Janina Petelczyc is a researcher in the TransSOL project in the Institute of Social Policy at the University of Warsaw. Her research interests lie in the field of labour and social security.

Deborah Russo is senior researcher of international law and lecturer of advanced international law and Public international law at the University of Florence. Her research interests focus on public international law and human rights.

Thomas Spejlborg Sejersen is a research assistant at the Department of Media, Cognition and Communication at the University of Copenhagen. Thomas' research interests lie in fiction theory, Danish Films and Danish Civil Society.

Hans-Jörg Trenz is Professor at the Centre for Modern European Studies at the University of Copenhagen and Research Professor at ARENA – Centre for European Studies, University of Oslo. His main field of interests are the emergence of a European public sphere and of European civil society, European civilisation and identity, migration and ethnic minorities, cultural and political sociology and social and political theory.

Ulrike Zschache is a post-doctoral research assistant at Siegen University. Her research interests lie in the area of European integration and the sociology of European societies, with a particular focus on European public spheres, civil societies and transnational solidarity.

