

Contents

Acknowledgements 9

Academics in Exile

Networks, knowledge exchange, and new forms of internationalization in academia. An introduction

Vera Axyonova, Florian Kohstall & Carola Richter 11

Histories of knowledge translation

Exile in a translational mode

Safeguarding German scholarship in Turkey and the United States during the Nazi reign

Azade Seyhan 33

Redefining precarity through knowledge production

The experience of the Indonesian 1965 exiles

Rika Theo & Maggi W.H. Leung 59

The politics of forced internationalization

The moral economies of “research in exile”

Rethinking a field from the perspective of reflexive migration research

Isabella Löhr 81

Blessing or curse?

Third-party funding as a paradoxical pull factor in forced internationalization

Aslı Vatansever 101

Scholars in exile in the Netherlands

When humanitarian support encounters neoliberal reform practices

Lizzy Anjel-van Dijk & Maggi W.H. Leung 123

The emergence of a “third space”?

Critical scholars from Turkey

Challenges and opportunities in Germany

Ergün Özgür 143

Networks matter

Scholars in exile in Germany and their relations to home and host communities

Carola Richter 163

Towards structural responses to the displacement of scholars

The Mapping Funds project

Aslı Telli 181

South-South perspectives

Expelling and receiving scholars

Recurring purges at universities and the emergence of alternative hubs for knowledge production in Turkey

Olga Hünler 205

The unheard voices

At-risk Syrian academics in Jordan, Lebanon, and Turkey

Nahed Ghazzoul 233

Academic freedom and the untold story of Venezuelan scholars
under pressure

David Gómez Gamboa & Lizzy Anjel-van Dijk 249

List of contributors 271

