Kaula, P. N.: Canons in analytico-synthetic classification.

In: Intern. Classificat. 7 (1980) No. 3, p. 118–125, 4 refs.

Presentation of the rules (canons) which S. R. Ranganathan laid down for the three planes of work, the Idea Plane, the Verbal Plane and the Notational Plane. Explanation of each of the 34 canons which are indispensable tools for the establishment of any classification system. An overall survey of the canons is given in Fig. 1. I.C.

Perreault, J. M.: Lois May Chan's new edition of Immroth's manual on the Library of Congress Classification.

In: Intern. Classificat. 7 (1980) No. 3, p. 126–130

The third edition of the standard manual on the Library of Congress Classification shows many improvements over the first and second, but comes no nearer either (a) to helping the practicing librarian deal with many of its irrationalities or (b) to pushing the Library itself toward substantive improvement – and such improvement is needed to keep such a system from becoming a relic of the pre-computer age of library utilization. (Author)

McKinlay, J.: Classification in Australian libraries.

In: Intern. Classificat. 7 (1980) No. 3, p. 131–134

The history of classification in Australia, and the pattern of use of general classification schemes, are briefly surveyed. The problems inherent in the use of imported classification schemes are considered, and illustrated, and the history of the relationship between Australia and the Dewey Decimal Classification (DDC) is described. The effectiveness of this liaison is attributed to the responsive policies of DDC and of its editor. (Author)

Wellisch, H. H.: Some vital statistics of abstracting and indexing.

In: Intern. Classificat. 7 (1980) No. 3, p. 135–139, 5 refs.

The almost 2400 items listed in a recently published bibliography of abstracting and indexing (A&I), covering a period from 1856 to 1976, are analyzed by number, age, language, and subject matter. About 90% of the A&I literature has been written since 1950. English is the predominant language (83%), Russian, German, French and Japanese contributed 15%, and all other languages together 2%. Russian material is on the rise, and will in future contribute about 10% of the A&I literature, mostly on automatic methods. The literature on automatic A&I is steadily growing and constitutes more than 15% of all entries. The rise and fall of some topics as measured by contributions throughout the period covered is traced. A&I methods invented in one country took about 8–10 years to be adopted in other countries, but the adoption rate is now somewhat faster, especially regarding automatic methods. (Author)

Felber, H.: Infoterm and TermNet. Plans, activities, achievement. In: Intern. Classificat. 7 (1980) No. 3, p. 140–145

A general survey of the activities of the International Information Centre for Terminology (Infoterm) in Vienna during the last ten years and of the aims and plans regarding further coordination work and related activities and measures, also with respect to the establishment of TermNet, a set of programmes for the development of international cooperation in terminology. The entire programme is also presented in diagram form. I.C.
