I should first and foremost thank my supervisors Gerald MacLean and Paul Young for their support of this project. Working with them has been enriching in more ways than one and I cannot imagine how I should have fared without them. I am incredibly grateful for their encouragement, intellectual rigour and personal kindness. I will never forget how well they guided me!

I would also like to thank the English Department at the University of Exeter for its generous financial support of my research. Without the departmental scholarship I was awarded, this project could not have been written. I would also like to thank the anonymous American sponsor for paying my fees. This support has been vital to my work, too.

The British Institute at Ankara provided me with excellent facilities to conduct research in Turkey in early 2012 and I would here like to express my gratitude to the BIAA for awarding me a fellowship for the duration of two months. Lutgarde Vandeput, Marc Herzog and Gulgun Girdivan made this stay unforgettable. Emrah Atasoy from Ankara's Hacettepe University showed me around in the Turkish Capital and we had many interesting and thought-provoking conversations.

At the University of Kent, I was awarded the Sasha-Roberts Scholarship for MA-students in 2008. This award supported my studies and without it I would not have done so well. Donna Landry and Caroline Rooney have been sources of continual inspiration during my time at Kent and beyond. Without them, I would never have embarked on a PhD-project. Maria Ridda, Jill Riddley, Jany Joseph and many others helped me to cope with the MA-stress and I would like to thank them here for doing so.

During my undergraduate studies at the University of Mannheim, Germany, I made too many friends to identify individually. However, among the faculty I would like to thank Uwe C. Steiner for introducing me to the philosophy of Theodor W. Adorno, and Stefan Glomb and Meinhard Winkgens for supervising my BA-dissertation.

Whenever I set off to a new destination, my parents Andrea and Ruediger Klement, as well as the rest of my family, lent their moral and financial support. They have made the vagrant life I live possible and I am eternally grateful for that.

A very special thanks goes to the following people at Exeter: Demelza Hookway, Emma Bird and Jennifer Barnes have unconditionally supported me during the events of November 2011, which I will never forget. Mohammed Sakhnini is a very good friend, companion and fellow traveller in Islamic lands. Abdulla Moaswes, Halima Islam, Samantha Borders, Rami Chehab, Nafeesah Younis, Assia Bennour, Jamila Hekmoun and many others have made the last few months on this project immensely enjoyable by providing me with good company and a safe space! Thank you very much!

Samar Hameed al Jahdali from King Abulaziz University in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, has opened doors for my future! The spiritual support of my Brothers and Sisters at the Exeter Mosque, as well as the University of Exeter Islamic Society, has been vital in recent months; especially Imam Mohammed Abrar and Hamza and Abdulrahman Saeid should be mentioned here!

My good old high school friends Michael Ziegler, Pascal Frank and Christian Kampkoetter embarked on very different routes from mine. However, I fondly remember every minute of the time we shared.

Last but not least, I would like to thank Abeer ELAshry in Cairo for the time we shared. It opened new doors and taught me a plethora of new things about both the world and myself.
