

Contents

Acknowledgement	7
I. Introduction	9
II. Destabilizing Meaning	41
1. The Textures of History	41
2. What is the script of your time?	42
2.1 I am everything and now what?	52
3. Economies of the Double-bind	59
3.1 ADS IMITATE ART, ART IMITATES LIFE, and LIFE IMITATES ADS.	64
3.2 The Economy of Blackness in Unbranded	66
III. Historical Entanglements of Black Revolutionary Women	89
1. De-Interpellating Interpellation—Visual Disobediences	89
2. How do I look? (Very good, I must say I am amazed!)	92
3. O my Body, will always remain in question!— Reviewing the Fanonian Moment	104
3.1 The Colonial Gaze	105
3.2 Entanglements	110
IV. Heterotemporality as a Way of Understanding the Contemporary	113
1. Reclaiming our time	113
2. Riffs on Real Time and the present that is fleeting though captured	116
2.1 Possible Presents	121
3. Rewind Selecta	123
4. Hetero-temporality	125
V. Paradox Synchronicities	129
1. Contextualization	129
2. IWHISHIWAS or WISHIWASHI ?	134
2.1 Taking a Closer Look	135
2.2 Disposed Desires	136
2.3 Retrospective Introspectives	139
2.4 Visual and Temporal Polyphonies	142
3. From Leitkultur to Leightkultur	143

VI. Abstract Facts	155
1. Enter and Exit the New Negro	155
1.1 Quare—"Built in History"	158
2. Enter and Exit the New Negro—From Invisible Visibilities	160
2.1 (Qu-)hair Politics and Material Connections	162
3. Enter the New Negro	165
3.1 Exit the New Negro	167
4. Ambiguity as Chance—Abstraction as Means of Identity	169
4.1 hidin' like thieves in the night from life, Illusions of oasis makin' you look twice	172
4.2 Norman Lewis—the not quite "invisible man" of abstract expressionism	173
4.3 Playing by the Rules—Turn off the light!	178
VII. Post-Post-black	183
VIII. Bibliography	193