

Contributors

Daniela Atanasova is a doctoral candidate in African Studies and a member of the Research Platform “Mobile Cultures and Societies” at the University of Vienna. Her research interests include mobilities and migration, women’s history, gender relations and social inequality in Zambia and Africa more broadly.

Romana Bund is a doctoral candidate in Cultural and German Studies and a member of the Research Platform “Mobile Cultures and Societies” at the University of Vienna. Her research explores the mobility and violent histories of human and non-human remains. In 2023, she was a visiting doctoral scholar at the University of Pennsylvania.

Dovaine Buschmann is a scientific project assistant at the Research Platform “Mobile Cultures and Societies” as well as a doctoral candidate in political science at the University of Vienna. Her research interests include mobility Studies, financial literacy education policies, feminist political economy and feminist policy analysis.

Petra Dannecker is Professor of Development Sociology at Vienna University since 2012 and was Head of the Department of Development Studies until 2022. Her research areas include migration and development, gender and development, development politics, transdisciplinarity and the science policy nexus. Regionally she has a focus on South and Southeast Asia.

Rachael Diniega is a climate change, mobilities, and human rights researcher. While a Project Assistant at the Research Platform “Mobile Cultures and Societies”, she has worked towards a Geography PhD at the University of Vienna.

She has conducted research and worked in sustainable development across North Africa and Central Asia.

Jana Donat is a doctoral candidate in International Development with a focus on displacement and relocation at the intersection of development and disaster Studies. As a member of the Research Platform “Mobile Cultures and Societies” at the University of Vienna, she fostered her approach on regimes of im/mobilities within relocation processes while conducting field research in Uruguay.

Alexandra Ganser holds the chair in North American literatures and cultures at the University of Vienna, where she also heads the Research Platform and FWF-doc.funds PhD program “Mobile Cultures and Societies: Interdisciplinary Studies on Transnational Formations” and co-directs the Centre for Canadian Studies (ZKS).

Barbara Gfoellner is a doctoral candidate in American Studies and a member of the Research Platform “Mobile Cultures and Societies” at the University of Vienna. Her research includes Caribbean and Black Studies, poetics, mobility Studies, and archipelagic Studies. She has held appointments as a visiting scholar at York University and the University of the West Indies, Mona.

Nicola Kopf is a doctoral candidate in German Literary Studies and a project assistant at the Research Platform “Mobile Cultures and Societies” at the University of Vienna. In her dissertation, she focuses on the “poetics of moving stillness” in the works of Austrian writer Marlen Haushofer. Her research interests include discourses on temporality and space, mobility Studies, and ecocritical debates.

Annegret Pelz is a retired professor of German at the University of Vienna and has been a faculty member of the FWF doc.funds project Cultural Mobility Studies since 2019. She headed the Research Platform “Mobile Cultures and Societies” until 2018 and was a 2019/2020 fellow at the Alfried Krupp Wissenschaftskolleg Greifswald. In the field of mobility Studies she has published recently “Travel in Social Media” (Korte and Sennfelder eds. 2022) and co-edited the volumes Mobile Cultures and Societies (with Alexandra Ganser, UVP, 2021).

Birgit Sauer is em. professor of Political Science at the University of Vienna. From 2018 to 2022 she was deputy speaker of the research platform “GAIN – Gender and Ambivalent In_Visibilites.” Her research fields include right-wing populism and gender, migration and gender, feminist state theory, and politics of emotions and affects.

