

Authors

Marina Bantiou is Adjunct Lecturer of History Didactics and Oral History at the Department of Early Childhood Education at the University of Thessaly and Visiting Research Fellow at the Department of Political Science and International Relations at the University of Peloponnese. Her research interests primarily revolve around Late-Modern and Contemporary Greek and European political and social history focusing on the intersection of history and media, public history and oral history, in addition to history didactics.

Anna Bauer is a sociologist, research fellow, and lecturer at Ludwig-Maximilians-University in Munich. She studied sociology, political science and philosophy in Munich and Caen. Her primary areas of research include medical sociology, organizational sociology, thanatology, as well as digitalization and health services research.

Thorsten Benkel is associate professor in Sociology at the University of Passau. His research deals with the sociologies of the body, law, religion and social change.

P. Boopathi is an Assistant Professor in the Department of English Studies at the Central University of Tamil Nadu, Thiruvarur, India. He teaches and researches refugee literature, lifewriting studies, literary and cultural disability studies, and cultural studies.

Julia Dornhöfer is a doctoral student at the Institute for Empirical Cultural Studies at the University of Freiburg and is currently researching interpretations of solidarity among older people. She is particularly interested in the interplay of biography, emotions and knowledge and holds a fascination for death-related topics.

Christoph Egen is Manager and scientific worker of the Department of Rehabilitation and Sports Medicine at Hannover Medical School. Furthermore, he is a lecturer for sociology of disability at Leibniz University Hannover. His scientific focus is on rehabilitation, disability and health services research.

Eric Benjamin Franklin is a scholar in the history of thanatology, currently working on his doctoral thesis on the legacy of assisted suicide in Switzerland at the University of Lucerne. His field of expertise extends to teaching history at higher secondary level.

Florian Greiner is managing director of the Lern- und Erinnerungsort Notaufnahmelager Giessen and associate professor in Modern History at the University of Augsburg. His research interests include European integration history, the history of death and dying, historical game studies, as well as media and cultural history in general.

Christoph Gutenbrunner is Professor emeritus at Hannover Medical School and former Head of Department of Rehabilitation Medicine. Currently he is President of Rehabilitation International. His research areas range from physiological studies on treatment effects, clinical trials in rehabilitation as well as health services and systems research.

Luisa Klatte is a PhD candidate at the Institute for Cultural Studies at the University of Leipzig. Her research interests focus on women's rights in (European) state socialism and reproductive rights, with a particular emphasis on abortion discourses in Germany and Poland. Her doctoral research is funded by a scholarship from the Hans Böckler Foundation.

Wiebke Lisner is senior researcher at the Institute for Ethics, History and Philosophy of Medicine, Hannover Medical School. Her research interests include contemporary history of medicine, European history, gender history, the history of midwifery, and the history of public health and infectious diseases.

Anne Ostermann is a sociologist and researcher at the Department of Rehabilitation and Sports Medicine at Hannover Medical School. Her research focuses on the intersection of health studies with organizational structures, labor market participation, and society.

Cornelia Weiß is a research associate at the Institute of Rehabilitation Medicine at the University Medical Centre Halle (Saale), where her research focuses on outpatient medical care for people with disabilities, the professional reintegration of people with mental illnesses and the conduct of everyday life for people with chronic illnesses.

Michael Zok is research fellow at German Historical Institute Warsaw. He studied Eastern European History and Political Science at Marburg and Gießen University. His research interests include cultural history of Eastern Europe in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, media history, and history of sexualities.