

Contents

Acknowledgements 9

Introduction 11

I. Aging Studies amid the Cultural, Social, and Biological

1 Theories of Age(ing) 23

1.1 The Beginnings of Social Gerontology: The Biological and the Social 23

1.2 Social and Cultural Impacts on the Aging Process 28

1.3 The Subcategories of Age 35

1.4 Extraordinary Forms of Aging 48

1.5 Extraordinary Age(ing) and Life Writing 51

II. Centenarians—The Stars of Aging

2 “I feel glorious”: The 100th Birthday of Macklemore’s Grandmother 63

2.1 New Beginnings: Rereading “Glorious” in Terms of Aging Studies 64

2.2 “I wanna do it all”: Extraordinary ‘Old’ Age and Extraordinary ‘Young’ Behavior 67

2.3 Centenarianism and the Aging Body in the Realms of a Hip-Hop Video 73

2.4 “Glorious” and the Portrayal of Extraordinary ‘Old’ Age 79

3 The Normality of Being a Centenarian:
A Day in the Life of Aldéa Pellerin-Cormier 81

3.1 Music, Setting, Camera: How the Documentary
‘Makes’ the Centenarian 84

3.2 Passing on Knowledge: The Centenarian’s Wisdom 90

3.3 Femininity, Sex, and Gender in Extraordinary ‘Old’ Age 96

3.4 Aging, Place, and Questions of Ability: (In)Dependence in Extraordinary ‘Old’ Age 99

3.5 Aldéa Pellerin-Cormier and the Normality of Centenarianism 103

4	Extraordinary 'Old' Age and (Auto)Biography: George Dawson's Life is So Good! at the Intersection of Age(ing), Race, and Class	105
4.1	Co-Authorship, Vulnerability, and the Art of Age (Auto)biographies	107
4.2	Aging through the Life-Course: The Interconnectedness of Race, Class, and Age	110
4.3	Framing Extraordinary 'Old' Age: The Fabrication of George Dawson	122
4.4	African American Aging Through the Life-Course and the Fabrication of Centenarianism in Life is So Good!	133
5	Representations of Extraordinary 'Old' Age: Same, Same, but Different?	137

III. Hutchinson-Gilford Progeria Syndrome—Questioning Assumptions of Age(ing)

6	Sensationalizing Disease: "Living with Progeria: Born Different"	151
6.1	Adalia Rose: Progeria between Fragility and Empowerment	153
6.2	The Siblings with Progeria: Michiel and Amber Vandeweert	165
6.3	"Living with Progeria": Illness as Phenomenon	172
7	Sam Berns: Progeria Between Clinical Trials and Lived Experience	175
7.1	Extraordinary Age in Life According to Sam	177
7.2	Progeria and Clinical Trials	183
7.3	A Philosophy for a Happy Life: Sam Berns' TED Talk	188
7.4	Sam Berns as Commodity: Agency and Perspective in Life According to Sam	190
7.5	Framing Extraordinary Age(ing) in Life According to Sam	195
8	Framing Progeria in an (Auto)Biography: Hayley Okines' Old Before My Time	197
8.1	Old Before My Time and Narrative Structure	199
8.2	Intertextual References and Conflicting Narratives: Clinical Trials and Connections to Other Children with Progeria	201
8.3	In Search for the Illness: Hayley's Diagnosis	207
8.4	Hayley Okines and the Construction of Extraordinary Age(ing)	209
8.5	The Progeria Community: Illness and Care as a Common Effort	217
8.6	Old Before My Time and Progeria at the Intersection of the Cultural, Social, and Biological	224
9	Progeria Narratives at the intersection of Age(ing) and Illness	227

10 Conclusion	231
----------------------	-----

Bibliography	241
---------------------	-----

