

Preface

This book is a thoroughly revised version of the philosophy dissertation I wrote at the University of Potsdam between 2008 and 2013. Modest parts of this book have been published in two book chapters: Plessner and the Mathematical-Physical Perspective: The Prescientific Objectivity of the Human Body (2014) and Exzentrizität, Dingstruktur und der Leib als Subjekt und Objekt (2017), as well as in an article in Continental Philosophy Review: “The Philosophical-Anthropological Foundations of Bennett and Hacker’s Critique of Neuroscience” (2016).

I thank the selection committee of the postgraduate program “Lebensformen und Lebenswissen” for accepting me into the program in 2008, thus enabling me to pursue my PhD. I am also grateful to my fellow PhD students and the postdocs in the program for their useful responses to the dissertation prospectus and chapter drafts.

I want to thank the following people for the feedback they gave me on dissertation chapters, papers I presented, or articles related to the dissertation, for advice or inspiring discussions of the topics concerned: Maarten Coolen, Julian Drews, Thomas Ebke, Robert Guerin, Samantha Matherne, Sophia Rost, Matthias Schloßberger, Richard Shusterman, and Corinde Wiers. I thank Mark Wrathall for his comments on the discussion of Merleau-Ponty and for his readiness to be the second assessor of my dissertation. I want to thank Hans-Peter Krüger for his willingness to be my adviser and first assessor of the dissertation, and for the critical and constructive feedback on my work, especially in relation to Plessner. I thank Rob Kars for advising me in questions concerning the English language. Finally, I thank my mother, Ineke Kroese, for supporting me financially during the period between two fellowships. This enabled me to stay fully focused until the job was done.
